

FOODSERVICE TIPS & INSPIRATION
COLLEGE & UNIVERSITY EXCLUSIVE

SERVE THESE IRISH AND TAIWANESE FOOD TRUCK MEALS

Street food is one trend that isn't declining any time soon, especially among college students. Young adults want fast, unique meals with bold flavors. Bonus points if the food is an authentic ethnic cuisine or highlights a trendy ingredient.

It's hard to hit on all the features your students want while keeping prep-time and ingredient counts low, so our chefs made two easy recipes for up-and-coming street food trends that you can make in even your smallest, busiest kitchens.

SPICE BAG

If you've never heard of Spice Bag, you aren't alone, but the first time you see this dish (or smell it) you're going to have to try it. This incredibly tasty street food is a hugely popular takeout dish in Ireland, and it will surely be just as successful for your takeout and delivery menus. Plus, you probably already have the ingredients on hand! Click the link to see how this craze developed and to get our recipe.

BAO

This irresistible Glazed Chicken Bao uses diced grilled chicken, ginger, honey, brown sugar, and soy sauce to create a savory, satisfying bite of chicken enclosed by a fluffy, steamed bun. Serve these Taiwanese-inspired food truck treats hot and fresh in your cafeteria lines or send them to hungry students through your delivery app. Click the link below to see how Bao traveled from Taiwan to the US and became a food truck hit, plus get our Glazed Chicken Bao recipe.
